Hey Ben

We decided not to roll out because it didn't present anything new We're not going to do things just because it's the way it was done before

No we decided not to post at all. I believe the decision was that it wasn't new information and didn't change anything about what we've been saying. Adding Deb to confirm my memory is correct about why.

Hi Ben and Nina,

A woman named Trish Callahan from ProPublica left me a voice mail on my personal phone tonight asking me to comment on why we decided not to go live with the measles risk assessment this week. She has the email I sent saying IOD did not want to pursue this and she wants to know why. She said she'd planning to write a story about it tomorrow and asked me to call her back. How do you want to handle? I can send you her number if one of you (or someone else on the media team) wants to call her back? I think it's a pretty simple response why we didn't go live with it so it may be helpful to respond if we can before there is media speculation.

Thanks,
Sara

good morning. Do we have an updated timeline for the measles risk assessment/scenario modeling?

And, any word on the measles risk assessment? With the request from TX, I wondered if there was perhaps a plan to release the risk assessment publicly? Checking with PPC first before reachign out to Rebecca.

they're aiming for release first week of March forgot to ask during our meeting, any update on the measles risk assessment publication data? Looks like it's shifted to 3/17. Is that confirmed? Or, still waiting on approval?
